RE: see title list below

Dear Grace Han Stanton:

RE: CRAIGSLIST WEBSITES May 2000; June 2000; October 2003; and July 2012 (Homepages and Primary Supporting Pages); and GROUP REGISTRATION FOR AUTOMATED DATABASE TITLED CRAIGSLIST CLASSIFIED ADS DATABASE, Published updates from April 19, 2012 to July 19, 2012.

We are refusing registration for these claims because the deposit requirements have not been met. These claims have been pending in our Office for quite some time following written correspondence and a meeting between Craigslist and our Office. Please accept my apology for the long delay in writing you further.

On August 09, 2012 our Office notified Craigslist, Inc., that it was not clear whether the correct deposits were submitted for copyright registration for the different versions of the Craigslist Website cited above. Many of the deposits referred to revisions and updates which occurred before and after the publication dates listed on the applications. We explained that our regulations offer no blanket copyright registration that covers past and future revisions and additions to a work that are published on different dates. A registration will cover only the copyrightable authorship first published on the date given on the registration record. Further, for a revised version of the website, the registration will only cover the copyrightable new matter added since the last published version. To be copyrightable, the revised version must be different enough from the original to be regarded as a new work or must contain a substantial amount of new material. Making minor changes or additions of little substance to a preexisting work will not qualify the work as a new version for copyright purposes.

On June 19, 2013, Associate Register of Copyright - Robert Kasunic and Chief of the Literary Division - Ted Hirakawa, met with Patrick Corrigan and Brain Hensessy from Perkins Cole, LLP to discuss the claims submitted for copyright registration. In that meeting, Messrs. Corrigan and Hensessy confirmed that the original web pages submitted for copyright registration were mistakenly taken from the wrong dates and that Craigslist, Inc. would prefer to file separate applications for different dates.

In addition, we received an application to register a database titled 'GROUP REGISTRATION FOR AUTOMATED DATABASE TITLED CRAIGSLIST CLASSIFIED ADS DATABASE, Published updates from April 19, 2012 to July 19, 2012.' In our meeting on June 19, 2013, you requested that we amend the registration record to change the range of dates from July 16, 2012 through August 8, 2012 because the license agreement to user-created posts submitted outside of that time period was not exclusive and therefore, Craigslist may not be the copyright owner of that material. We explained that registration is not possible for the claim as submitted and that a supplemental registration for the correct dates would not be appropriate with a claim in litigation. If you wish to register a different range of dates, a separate application, identifying material from that 3 month period, and a separate filing fee is required. You agreed that refusal and the filing of new claims was appropriate.

Since we did not receive the correct deposit copies for the websites and it is not possible to substitute an application and registration materials for a previously submitted claim, we must refuse registration for all the works. In accordance with our practices, we will file the applications and retain the non-refundable filing fees.

This letter is for your information only; no response is necessary.

Sincerely,

Ted A. Hirakawa
